COUNCIL READY TO ACT TONIGHT

Councilman-at-Large Recount Petition Filed From Wellsville

Two recounts in Salem balloting will be asked of the Columbiana county board of elections before the official deadline tomorrow, it was indicated today.

While city council already has indicated it would appeal for a recount of votes cast for and against the poor relief levy, Fred Shaffer, pottery worker and defeated Third ward council candidate, announced he would ask for a recount of ballots cast in the two precincts of his ward.

Shaffer lost to Charles Renkenberger. Democratic incumbent, by a seven-vote margin in the official count. Renkenberger, according to official tabutations, received 252 votes and Shaffer 245. The Republican aspirant polled 101 votes in precinct A and 144 in precinct B of the Third ward, while Renkenberger received 105 and 147, respec-

CASUALTY

One of the first casualties of every war is sense of humor. Things quickly get out of proportion and balance, but because that's what war essentially is anyway-disproportion and misbalance-the incongruities aren't evident to combatants.

Passing over the cosmic comedy of men striving to destroy one another, which would be evident only to a man from Mars, one is struck by two ludierous items in recent news from belligerent areas. The more ludicrous, naturally, is from Germany, where lack of a sense of proportion is so deeply ingrained it has generated two wars in the span of one gen-

German experts solemnly have discovered the steel used in the bomb which wrecked the Munich beer hall that Adolf Hitler left fust in time last Wednesday night is "foreign." This will be of great assistance to Dr. Goebbels, busily engaged in proving the British tried to assassinate der fuehrer. If he can find the Union Jack on the premises, the case will be airtight.

The other item is from England, where Holy Bibles for the fighting men have been bound in three different colors to blend with their uniforms-khaki for land troops, light blue for aviators, dark blue for sailors. There's nothing funny about giving Bibles to the empire's Christian soldiers, but even an Englishman might concede that making them part of the color scheme of national defense is slightly cockeyed

CURE FOR COMMUNIQUE FEVER

The war between propagandists is toughening up. Words are being filled with high explosives. Undercover operations are increasing.

France and Great Britain want it believed that Germany is prepared to violate the neutrality of Belgium and the Netherlands. Germany wants it believed that nothing is going to happen. Belgium and the Netherlands want it believed that something is bound to happen unless so many people quit saying something's going to happen.

Meanwhile, the British want it believed that Italy is cooperating in plans for a trade agreement. Prevjously, they wanted it believed that Russia was enthusiastic about a trade agreement. This is a match for what the Germans want believed-that they will do whatever Russian trading's going to be done. Each day brings a new list of things the European belligerents want believed, preferably in the United States.

The only way to fight communique fever is to lie down as soon as its symptoms are discovered. Main symptom is willingness to believe any particular line of ideas coming straight from the horse's mouth; i. e., the governments concerned. Like the lazy man who said thoughts of exercise quickly passed if he reclined, the intended victim of communique fever can save himself by complete relaxation at the critical moment of credibility,

REFORMING REFORM

University of Chicago's upsetting experience with football reform threatens to bring about a reform of reform. If it happens, the university will make as much progress in athletics as it has made in education.

But reform of football reform, which is what Chicago's preparing to do, means nothing of the kind. The university's teams have been too weak, but no one wants them to become too strong. #### CASUALTY

One of the first casualties of every war is sense of humor. Things quickly get out of proportion and balance, but because that's what war essentially is anyway-disproportion and misbalance-the incongruities aren't evident to combatants.

Passing over the cosmic comedy of men striving to destroy one another, which would be evident only to a man from Mars, one is struck by two ludierous items in recent news from belligerent areas. The more ludicrous, naturally, is from Germany, where lack of a sense of proportion is so deeply ingrained it has generated two wars in the span of one gen-

German experts solemnly have discovered the steel used in the bomb which wrecked the Munich beer hall that Adolf Hitler left just in time last Wednesday night is "foreign." This will be of great assistance to Dr. Goebbels, busily engaged in proving the British tried to assassinate der fuehrer. If he can find the Union Jack on the premises, the case will be airtight.

The other item is from England, where Holy Bibles for the fighting men have been bound in three different colors to blend with their uniforms-khaki for land troops, light blue for aviators, dark blue for sailors. There's nothing funny about giving Bibles to the empire's Christian soldiers, but even an Englishman might concede that making them part of the color scheme of national defense is slightly

The war between propagandists is toughening up. Words are being filled with high explosives. Undercover operations are increasing.

France and Great Britain want it believed that Germany is prepared to violate the neutrality of Belgium and the Netherlands. Germany wants it believed that nothing is going to happen. Belgium and the Netherlands want it believed that something is bound to happen unless so many people quit saying something's going to happen.

Meanwhile, the British want it believed that Italy match for what the Germans want believed—that of Mrs. Grant Gorby of Columbia st. they will do whatever Russian trading's going to be done. Each day brings a new list of things the was held at the Prospect street school Thursday eve- tained at a birthday surprise party European belligerents want believed, preferably in the United States.

The only way to fight communique fever is to lie down as soon as its symptoms are discovered. Main symptom is willingness to believe any particular line of ideas coming straight from the horse's mouth; i. e., the governments concerned. Like the lazy man who said thoughts of exercise quickly passed if he reclined, the intended victim of communique fever can save himself by complete relaxation at the critical moment of credibility.
